2023 Environmental Justice Academy

Throughout its 55-year history, Smithsonian's Anacostia Community Museum has partnered with local community organizations, youth advocates and schools to engage teens in understanding and leading social change. In spring of 2023, the Museum will launch the first cohort of its hybrid Environmental Justice Academy. An outgrowth of the museum's Women's Environmental Leadership (WEL) initiative, the Academy will engage 35 young women and non-binary youth of color living in communities along the Anacostia River in explorations of the intersections of community, justice, and environment. Guided in conversation by women whose work in multiple environmental spaces has effected change at local, regional, national, and international levels, participants will explore the pathways of Advocacy & Public Policy, Arts & Culture, Faith, and Inclusive Leadership (Women & Youth).

Participants

The Academy is open to young women and non-binary youth of color, ages 14-18, living in communities along the Anacostia River and its tributaries in Montgomery and Prince George's counties in Maryland and the District.

Applications will be open Dec 8, 2022 through Jan 20, 2023

Stipends

ACM is happy to provide a stipend of $1,497.00 for each participant.

Go-Go Beginnings

A Monthly Discussion Series, brought to you by SupaRadio, Come be a part of the first of a monthly series of group discussions about our beloved music called Go-Go.

As lovers of the music, we all were introduced to it at some point in our lives. As the city continues to support the preservation of the history and culture of Go-Go, let's take it back to our ancestors and share our history through telling our stories of how our love of Go-Go began.
